

BPL technology, while attractive, should be thoroughly researched before large scale deployment. The potential for RF interference to licensed radio services is great, and every potential means to minimize this should be taken in to consideration. This will not only effect licensed services, but has the potential to make reception of HF broadcasts difficult in the United States, further eroding our ability to access diverse news, entertainment and cultural information.